

FASHION PLATE WINS FASHION AWARD

Atlanta, GA. (UPI) The fashion world was stunned today by the announcement of famed web cartoonist and stylish trend setter, Jeff 'The Wizard of Draws' Bucchino as the recipient of year 2000 Clothing Designer of the Year award. Bruce Fairey, chairperson of the Designers Guild of America selection committee listed Jeff's "creative vision, exemplary talent and truly delightful streak of whimsy", as only three of the many reasons for his startling selection as honoree.

"His 'Pilot in Command' cartoon design embroidered on a Red Eagle Trading Company, 6.75 Ounce Pique Knit Sport Shirt 100% cotton, welt collar and cuffs, horn tone buttons and double needle bottom hem is sheer genius," gushed Bruce. "This shirt fits the active and professional lifestyle with full cut comfort, and priced unbelievably low at $25.95 for most sizes, is a bargain hunter's dream come true."

The 'Pilot in Command' shirt is the second in Jeff's Aviation Series of clothing. First in the wildly popular series was 'Slips with Flaps'. Even though it was silk-screened and not embroidered, the Slips with Flaps shirt proved to be a hit with aviators from across the country. "I bought eight of them", smiled veteran pilot and certified flight instructor Gene Whitt, "One for each of the kids and grandkids."

Fellow clothing designer Versace was not available for comment at the time of publication, and according to anonymous sources was thought to be under heavy sedation.

WE GLUG TO FLY AND IT SHOWS

Atlanta, GA. (AP) Delta Airlines has reportedly applied to the FAA for permission to increase the frequency of flights between their home base of operations at Atlanta Hartsfield Airport and Los Angeles International to accommodate the swelling number of passengers along the route. When asked to confirm or deny the rumors, spokesman Ron 'Delta' Dawn said, "Our research indicates that American Honda has been ferrying a significant number of employees, including Candy Bucchino, from Atlanta to L.A. and back again on a regular basis and plans to continue doing so well into the next year. Delta needs to be prepared. Even if we are unable to obtain Federal approval for the additional flights, we will be contracting with our suppliers for larger quantities of roasted peanuts and those cute little bottles of booze that those Honda people love. Lots more booze."

Although authorities at Jim Beam Enterprises, Inc., declined to comment on the Delta Airlines statement, activity surrounding distillery operations appeared frantic.

HOPE SPRINGS ETERNAL

Dahlonega, GA. (Reuters) Educators and faculty members at North Georgia College in Dahlonega are eagerly awaiting the final decision of high school senior April Bucchino, as she ponders the location of her future matriculation. "We're as giddy as schoolgirls", bubbled Professor Lee Grant. "We're flattered and tickled pink just to be considered as an educational possibility by April."

Situated in the foothills of the Smoky Mountains, Dahlonega was the site of America's first goldrush and is now home to North Georgia College, one of the nation's finest military schools.

With a grade point average just below 4.0, April is looking forward to receiving a substantial amount of financial aid from the state of Georgia and the HOPE scholarship. Funded by the Georgia state lottery, the HOPE scholarship program has enabled thousands of Georgia students to attend college in exchange for high academic marks.

"Although I've tentatively chosen nursing, not military studies as my major," the demure blonde explained. "imagine attending class with all those clean-cut boys in uniform marching to and fro, saying 'Yes ma'am, no ma'am', it's enough to make anyone giddy."

Although the Commandant of the North Georgia Cadet Corp was unavailable for comment, activity surrounding the cadet compound appeared frantic.

Police Blotter

Jeffery C. Bucchino of 6035 Rolling Oaks Lane, Cumming, Georgia, 30040 submitted an application for a weapons permit.

THE LEASEE OF TWO EVILS

Alpharetta, GA (AP) American Honda issued a press release today confirming that the only year 2000 model Redneck Red Acura TL in their inventory has been leased by Candance Bucchino. "We thought we'd never get lid of that thing", giggled a vastly relieved Honda executive. "She debate for months about what coror to rease: first led, then brack, then led again, then gleen, it was driving us crazy."

Mr. Bucchino was unavailable for comment and reportedly under heavy sedation.

DESIGNING LEMON

Detroit, MI (UPI) The 3 major U.S. automakers and the Federal Highway Safety Administration have reported disappointing results with their plans to use Jeffery Bucchino in designing safer cars. "His experiences made him a resource that we couldn't pass up", wailed one high ranking auto executive. "How were we supposed to know that he'd start driving safely so suddenly?"

The highly sought after knowledge so unique to this young man, stems from his 2 prior vehicle accidents and seemed to indicate that he would yield a treasure trove of valuable information on how to survive unscathed.

When contacted for comment, Georgia Insurance Commissioner John Oxendine replied, "Although Jeffery has managed to avoid any significant traffic incidents during the last year, we are still monitoring him closely and we would encourage all drivers to do the same".

DENTAL DOC DESTITUTE?

Cumming, GA. (AP) North Georgia area dentists were shocked and saddened to learn that the prosperous Dental Clinic in Cumming, Georgia is headed for lean times, even in the midst of a booming economy. "I guess we should have seen it coming; nothing lasts forever", sobbed dental hygienist Nancy Broadsmile.

Accountants for the dental clinic have indicated that the probable cause for the downturn in business is due primarily to the termination of orthodontic treatment of Jeffery Bucchino. "Oh sure, we'll last for a little while longer", sighed Dr. Whitney, D.D.S., "we're still treating April for her problems and squeezing every penny we can out of that mess. But now I suppose we'll have to start looking for ways to tighten our belts and trim the operating budget. Oh, the humanity."

Mr. and Mrs. Bucchino were unavailable for comment and according to unnamed sources, were planning a quiet celebration alone, in their modest 3 bedroom cardboard box.
